

APOLOGY IS SPORTSMANLIKE

Captain Fred Church Gives Due Credit to the Winning Myrtles.

Captain Fred Church of the Healan Boat Club, one of the hardest working members of the club, and who was one of the most ardent believers in the prowess of the crews of the Blues for the Fourth of July races, shows his true sportsmanlike spirit in the following communication relative to the result of the races:

Through carelessness I was responsible for an article in Saturday's Advertiser that was very unfair and unsportsmanlike, and now can only make my apology as public as the article in question. I have been asked to write on the afternoon of the Fourth a short statement giving my impressions of the races, being told that Captain Harris of the Myrtles would do the same. Reaching town dead tired, I hurriedly scratched off a few lines and foolishly sent them in for publication, without looking at them. When I read them in the paper the next morning I was simply aghast, for while they were my own words, they did not express my meaning at all.

Nothing was further from my thoughts than the effort to rob the Myrtles of any of the glory of their magnificent victory. I supposed that Captain Harris would write the usual article that as victor he would be entitled to, and in defence of my own boys simply intended to give as my personal opinion that under conditions that we had been used to, we would have won. The Myrtles have worked long and earnestly, and well earned and deserved their double victory, and I herewith extend to them, and more particularly to their plucky senior crew, my apologies.

In justice to our own club it is only fair to say that not one single member of it knew of the article until it appeared in the paper, and I feel very certain not one of them approves of it. Trusting that my worthy opponents will condone my error, and accept this apology in the spirit in which it is given, I remain,

F. J. CHURCH.

NEW CANE UNLOADER.

Patent Issues to Henry Froehlich of Lihue.

WASHINGTON, June 18.—A patent issued June 10, to Henry Froehlich, of Lihue, Kauai, Hawaii, No. 702,096, covers an automatic device for unloading cane cars and distributing the cane over the carrier. As is the case with many devices, the unloading is effected by hooks or fingers mounted on an endless band and so supported that they may be lowered as the car is discharged. The novel features consist, first, in mounting the fingers, not upon chains, but upon the slats of an endless carrier, whereby they may be adjusted to act evenly over the body of cane; second, in giving to this carrier such a form that when brought to its lowermost position the fingers move in substantial contact with the bottom of the car and parallel therewith; third, in providing an automatic downward feed and an automatic stop and return at the lowest position. It is claimed that the operation is automatic in character and can be controlled by one man.

Nearly Drowned.

A son of Captain Rosehill came within an ace of being drowned on Sunday afternoon. Whalen, where Captain Rosehill invited him below and did "the needful."
